Jaclyn Zanger Wins Egg Cracking Contest at 2012 IPE
Featherfest® FoodFight

ATLANTA – Jaclyn Zanger, a University of Connecticut Poultry Club student from Long Island, NY, was named the winner of the 2012 Featherfest® FoodFight Egg Cracking Contest, held at the International Poultry Expo on Wednesday, January 25, 2012. The event was sponsored by the U.S. Poultry & Egg Association, Atlanta Convention & Visitors Bureau, Georgia World Congress Center, and Levy Restaurants.

With a large group of attendees and exhibitors cheering them on, 12 participants cracked eggs into a plate under a two-minute timeline. The participants with the most unbroken yokes in the plate moved forward in the competition.

In a caged, 30-second timed stand-off with another competitor, Jaclyn Zanger had 23 unbroken yokes. Her quickness and determination resulted in a grand prize win of an Apple iPad, with the remaining participants receiving a 2012 souvenir t-shirt.
